A New Platform For Artists and Budding Filmmakers – enter ‘Takecare {out} There’ Short Film Competition NOW

The ALSO Foundation, the peak body for GLBTIQ affairs, is calling all artists and budding filmmakers to get creative for the inaugural Take Care {out} There Short Film Competition. The contest offers a unique and fresh communications platform for emerging talent as well as the chance to debut works before award-winning judges Tony Ayres and Ana Kokkinos.

Take Care {out} There is modelled on Make A Film, Make A Difference, TAC’s short film competition based around road safety. The contest is open to anyone with a completed or in-production work that addresses sexual health or relationship issues around sexual health. The ALSO foundation is looking for films between 30 seconds and 15 minutes and welcomes all mediums and formats.

Entrants will be in the running for the winning prize of $2500 and $1000 of film equipment hire from Open Channel as well as the prestige of a gala screening at the Melbourne Fringe Festival on Tuesday 4 October. Further glory abounds with screenings across leading industry events via our affiliated festival partners.

The ALSO foundation urges filmmakers and artists to act now and ensure a diverse and competitive contest for all involved. The deadline for submission has been extended to Friday 16 September and entry forms can be downloaded from www.takecare.org.au or direct from the ALSO Foundation L8 – 225 Bourke St, Melbourne.
